Located in LaSalle, Maison Sault-Saint-Louis is a non-profit organization that has been providing free palliative care since January 2025. With its eight rooms and welcoming spaces, it creates a warm, home-like atmosphere for the well-being of patients, their loved ones, and healthcare teams. The idea was born in 2012 thanks to the founding committee. After years of work and fundraising, the Maison now welcomes patients thanks to the dedication of donors, partners, and volunteers.

The Objective: Harmonizing well-being and functionality for patients, families, and caregivers

As part of a move to new facilities, Maison Sault-Saint-Louis aimed to create a serene and comforting space for end-of-life patients and their families. Designing a calm, bright, and nature-inspired environment was a priority for the organization. The space needed to be spacious to promote relaxation while ensuring family privacy, allowing them to spend precious moments in dignity and tranquility.

Simultaneously, functionality and ergonomics were key criteria for caregivers to guarantee optimal working conditions. Lastly, the project sought to blend aesthetics and durability while optimizing the budget funded by donors.

The Solution: Creating living spaces that support both patient care quality and family comfort

To meet the project's objectives, spaces were carefully designed to offer a harmonious and welcoming environment. The reception area, a true entry point, was custom-designed to provide a warm welcome and immediately put families at ease.

The common living room, furnished with comfortable Flint armchairs, offers a serene space for loved ones to recharge. The dining room, featuring friendly tables and a counter, provides a cherished area for meals and shared moments. The entire space also benefits from a choice of neutral colors, both in the furniture and the decor, which helps create a calming atmosphere.

“The furniture was carefully selected to create a comfortable space conducive to calm and well-being.”

– Stéphanie Trameson, Communications and Events Manager, Maison Sault-Saint-Louis and its Foundation

In the patient rooms, every detail was thoughtfully considered to ensure comfort and practicality. For instance, the inclusion of a fireplace and refrigerator allows visitors to stay close to the patient in a friendly setting conducive to extended visits. Additionally, a day bed was installed to provide a rest area for visitors. Rooms also feature ample storage to meet the needs of patients and their guests. The layout was optimized to accommodate multiple visitors simultaneously while facilitating caregiver movement and interventions.

To maximize the durability of the seats and simplify their cleaning, a significant clearance space (1 3/8 inches) separates the backrest and the seat cushion. Furthermore, Crypton fabric with a waterproof barrier and antimicrobial protection was chosen for the armchairs in both rooms and common areas, ensuring a hygienic and easy-to-maintain environment.

“Through custom design, the rooms strike an ideal balance between practicality for caregivers and comfort for patients and their families.”

– Marc Pelletier, Business Development, Logiflex

Finally, the administrative spaces and conference room, equipped with functional and comfortable furniture, provide an ideal setting for meetings and daily management while meeting both practicality and elegance requirements. The entire layout, highlighted by neutral color choices, contributes to a calming and serene ambiance.

The Result: A peaceful palliative care environment where every moment matters

The new facilities at Maison Sault-Saint-Louis represent a true haven of peace. True to its mission, it welcomes and supports individuals at the end of life and their families in an environment of respect and dignity. Furthermore, it provides administrative and care teams with an optimal workplace and conditions. This project, made possible through thoughtful design and the invaluable commitment of numerous donors, embodies a model of warm and human-centered care, perfectly adapted to the needs of patients and their families.
