

Artopex and Logiflex unite under the Artopex brand

Granby, Quebec, March 16, 2026 – Two leading North American office furniture companies, Artopex and Logiflex, announce a major strategic move: a full unification under a single brand, Artopex. This step strengthens the organization's reach, capabilities, and service across the North American market. As of April 20, 2026, all operations will officially be conducted under the Artopex name.

This consolidation brings together more than 800 employees, six manufacturing facilities, and complementary expertise, positioning Artopex as a strong, agile manufacturer ready to meet the demands of large-scale and complex projects across the continent.

Since 2015, Artopex and Logiflex have operated as complementary entities within the same group. The unification of their operations allows for shared talents, optimized teams, and faster decision-making, ensuring that partners and clients have access to a more responsive and capable organization.

"By unifying under one brand, we create clarity, efficiency, and momentum," says Daniel Pelletier, President of Artopex. "This allows us to strengthen our teams, enhance our processes, and invest strategically in products, networks, and people, serving clients more effectively across North America."

Artopex designs and manufactures a complete range of office furniture, including workstations, metal storage solutions, chairs and lounge seating, meeting tables, reception furniture, acoustic pods, and integrated systems — all built for modern, high-performance workspaces.

As part of this transition, Yan Sinclair is appointed Executive Vice President of Sales, leveraging his expertise to drive the organization's growth and enhance support for architects and interior designers who influence workspace decisions.

"The unification allows us to align teams under a common vision, deploy a stronger and more structured sales force, and provide partners with a broader network, expanded offerings, and a capable organization for high-end projects," notes Yan Sinclair.

Key departments such as marketing and product design are strengthened, improving brand consistency, innovation, and speed-to-market for new solutions.

For dealers, partners, architects, designers, and clients, this unification provides simplified structure, an expanded product range, and seamless access to all group solutions. A single brand, a single catalog, and harmonized processes ensure a smoother, more coherent, and high-performing experience.

Teams from Logiflex and Artopex are working closely to ensure a smooth integration, without disruption to services, operations, or deliveries.

By combining talent, infrastructure, and expertise, Artopex consolidates its position as a key North American manufacturer and a major player in the office furniture industry.

About Artopex

Family-owned North American company, Artopex is a leader in office furniture, providing innovative solutions designed for modern workplaces. With decades of expertise, the company is known for its manufacturing quality, design excellence, and commitment to sustainability.

About Logiflex

Logiflex is recognized for its flexible and customized approach to office furniture. With local manufacturing and proven expertise, the company has earned a strong presence in North America. Logiflex will continue operations under the Artopex brand, bringing its Quebec-based expertise to the organization.

Internal Contact

Philippe Gosselin – Marketing director

p.gosselin@artopex.ca

C 450.531.4839